A SCHOOL OF OFFICE-HOLDERS. Congressman Adams, of one of the Chicago districts, has a scheme. It is a novel one, but withal not such an one as is likely to commend itself to the republican instincts or principles of the American people. Mr. Adams' scheme is based upon the assumption that the United States, having no large standing army, should be provided with a large available list of men trained for war, who could be called upon to officer a volunteer army in case of necessity Therefore he suggests that the capacity of West Point military academy be doubled or trebled, and that the surplus of graduates, after officering the army, training in the course of their military studies, and be subject to call for military duty whenever occasion should re-
